

Nimbyism Increases Despite Market Woes

3-13-2009

The UK Saint Index, the annual survey on public attitude to property development, shows that 51 per cent of respondents oppose private residential development. Last year the figure stood at 40 per cent. The Saint Consulting Group said that 74 per cent of respondents deem the government's target of building three million homes by 2020 to be unrealistic, while in 2008, 68 per cent thought this to be the case.
